It was occupied by Mrs. Florence Webster and daughter, Mrs. George Congdon and children, and was located near the entrance to the state camp ground. The firestarted in the west side of the house in the attic. The occupants of the bouse had plenty of time to get out, getting out a good deal of furniture and clothing. The fire burned for more than two hours, and with the help of the wind, which was blowing at great velocity, changing every few minutes to all directions of the compass. Large pieces of burning wood lodged on a mimber of houses which were some distance away. The roofs were dampened enough to keep them from getting affire. It was thought that several houses located near the burning building might have caught fire if thad not rained considering the night. The origin of the fire is not known. The bouse was instinct.
